DEMOCRACY IN CONGRESS

REDEEMING PROMISES WITH IMPORTANT LEGISLATION.

House Passes Popular Election of U. S. Senators Bill and Publicity of Campaign Expenses Bill.

The Democrats in Congress are treating this country to the greatest display of statesmanship the country has had for a generation. They are making every Democrat feel proud to be a Democrat and making others wish they belonged to a party who not only made promises but are redeeming those promises without any foolishness.

The Democrats in Congress won the respect and admiration of the whole country by the way they went to work to organize the House, curtailing the power of the speaker and preparing plans of legislation and last week Democracy in control of the House made good with legislation.

The Democratic party has declared its platform for a constitutional amendment for the popular election of U. S. Senators and also in favor of legislation providing for the publicity of campaign expenses before as well as after election, and it would have been senseless to have wasted time on debating measures the party had already passed upon.

On last Thursday the bill for the popular election of U. S. Senators was debated six hours and then put to a vote and carried by big vote of 296 to 16. Among the latter were former Speaker Cannon and Republican Leader Mann.

On the following day the bill for publicity of campaign expenses before as well as after election and though Republican Leader Mann resorted to all kinds of parliamentary tactics to waste time the bill was pushed to final passage by vote of 303 to nothing.

The Canadian Reciprocity bill was taken up on Saturday and twenty hours debate was agreed upon. A vote is not expected to be reached before Wednesday of this week. This is the bill the last Congress refused to pass when requested to do so by President Taft. The protectionists blocked the way in the interest of those who have made great fortunes from highly protected articles.

After the Canadian Reciprocity bill has been disposed of the farmers' free list bill will then be taken up by the House. The following articles are included in this free list bill.

Plows, harrows, beaters, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horse rakes, cultivators, threshing machines, cotton gins, farm wagons, farm carts and all other agricultural implements, including repair parts. Bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, and fabrics suitable for baling cotton; burlaps and bags for sacking agricultural products; hoop or iron band for baling cotton, wire for baling hay, straw and other agricultural products; grain leather, buff, split, round or sole leather, bend, or belting leather, boots and shoes, harness, saddles and saddlery, and leather for manufactured articles. Barbed fence wire, wire rods, wire strands or wire rope, wire woven or manufactured for wire fencing. Beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork and meats of all kinds, fresh, salted, pickled, dried, smoked, dressed or undressed, prepared, or preserved in any manner; bacon, hams, shoulders, lard, lard compounds and lard substitutes; sausages, buckwheat flour, cornmeal, wheat and rye flour, bran, middlings, and other offals of grain, oatmeal and rolled oats and all prepared cereal foods; biscuits, bread, wafers and similar articles not sweetened; timber, hewn, sided or squared, round timber, used for spars or in building wharves; shingles, laths, fencing posts, sawed boards, planks, deals and other lumber, rough or dressed, except ebony, rosewood and all other cabinet woods. Sewing machines and salt complete the free list.

What the U. S. Senate, the last refuge of the interests and standpatters will do remains to be seen, but the country will know with whom the responsibility will lie.

Will Complete Road Soon.

Work on the state road from McSherrystown to Joseph L. Neiderer's farm in Mt. Pleasant township, a distance of about two and a half miles, is progressing favorably. Twenty-five men, in charge of John Koutz, foreman of construction for contractor W. B. Johnston, of Spring Grove, are doing the work. They are now as far as John Rebert's farm, and have about a mile yet to finish, which they expect to accomplish in the early part of the summer.

Notice.

To the delinquent taxpayers of Cumberland township, Adams county, Pa.: Owing to the death of Abraham Keckler, former collector, his books must be settled. The undersigned will sit in Arbitration Room, Court House, on Saturdays, April 22 and 29 between the hours of 1 and 3 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of receiving all back taxes past due said township. All taxes found open in said books after last date of sitting will be dealt with according to law.

A. V. REDDING, Agent.

Lafayette's Committee Appointment.

Congressman D. F. Lafey in the make-up of the minority representation on the House Committees received the appointment he asked for from Republican Leader James R. Mann, to the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads. Having secured buildings and appropriations for York, Gettysburg and Hanover, Mr. Lafey was not an applicant for his old position on the Building Committee. As a member of the Postoffice and Post Roads Committee he proposes to work for an experimental parcels post, the only opposition to which comes from the express companies.

The Lafey bill for a Lincoln memorial highway between Washington and Gettysburg will be acted upon by the Committee on Military Affairs. Mr. Lafey is enthusiastic over the outlook of the project. The road if built, would connect with the Sprout main highways for which the State of Pennsylvania is considering expending $50,000,000.

Horse Thief at Large.

When William Howe, residing along the turnpike about a mile below York Springs, went to his stable on a recent morning he discovered that his horse had been stolen. By buggy tracks made outside the building and the absence of a bridle and line it was surmised that the thieves had driven off in a buggy and led the horse behind. Mr. Howe communicated to the various towns by phone and drove to Hanover but could get no clue to the thieves. The stolen animal was a medium sized bay horse with a white spot in its forehead. He had the horse insured in the York County Mutual Live Stock Association and will receive $50 insurance. Mr. Howe has had bad luck with his stock during the past year having lost by death a valuable horse and cow and now this horse that was stolen.

Borough and Township Offices.

Secretary of the Commonwealth, the Hon. Robert McAfee in a circular letter explains how the term of borough and township officers are affected by the 1909 amendments. After quoting sections 4 and 2 of the amendments, he adds: It is plain to be seen that all officers elected at the February election in 1909 for a term of three years, must necessarily end in an even numbered year, 1912. No court or legislation has the constitutional authority to abridge the official term. Under this provision such officers shall hold their offices until the next even numbered year, which will be 1914. Therefore it is not necessary to elect successors to said offices before the November election of 1913.

High Pressure Days.

Men and women alike have to work incessantly with brain and hand to hold their own nowadays. Never were the demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, more numerous. The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of body and brain, and in extreme cases in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. From personal knowledge, we can recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on all the vital organs, builds up the whole system, and fits men and women for these high-pressure days.

Superior Court Affirms Cases.

Two cases had been appealed to the Superior Court from Adams county, Estate of Henry Shultz, dec'd, and U. L. Gladfelter vs. Mendels Brothers, and were argued on March 13. On Monday, April 17, the Superior Court handed down decisions in both cases, affirming the lower Court.

The case of U. L. Gladfelter vs. Mendels Brothers, was a dispute about fixtures in a sewing factory at East Berlin and in which the plaintiff was awarded a verdict of $346.70 by the jury. The affirmance of judgment will result in payment of verdict by defendants. The plaintiff was represented by Wm. Hersh, Esq., and defendants by W. C. Sheely and John D. Keith, Esqs.

The case of Estate of Henry Shultz, deceased, involved question where a son turned up after distribution had been made to collateral heirs. It was decided in the court below and affirmed by the Superior Court that the administrator was not entitled to protection by the payment to the collateral heirs and must pay the estate of $471 to the son, a minor living in Kansas and having H. U. Walter as his guardian.

On Wednesday evening a number of ladies met at engine house and decided to hold the food sale on the last Friday and Saturday of this month, April 28th and 29th. It will be held at the engine house. There will be a special meeting of the Fire Company this Wednesday evening to decide upon plans to help along the Food Sale. Next week the ladies will have another meeting to make their final arrangements.

EVENTS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

GETTYSBURG SENT ITS FIRST COMPANY TO THE CIVIL WAR

And the Culmination of that War at Gettysburg will be Fittingly Celebrated in 1913.

Plans are being prepared for the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg more than two years hence, a celebration of the greatest war the earth has ever witnessed and a war the 50th anniversary of the beginning of which is just now taking place.

Fifty years ago Gettysburg and the whole nation was experiencing the terror and alarm of the announcement that the Civil War had started. On April 12, 1861, the first shot of that war was fired at Fort Sumpter, April 14 that fort had surrendered. April 15 President Lincoln had issued his proclamation calling for 75,000 men. April 19, the date of this issue, and just fifty years ago, Gettysburg was electrified with the news of the riot on Pratt street, Baltimore, when a Massachusetts regiment was fired upon and on Monday, April 22, this town experienced one of the most thrilling days in its history in sending away to the war just begun its first quota of soldiers. The boys of '61 left on the train on April 22 and went to York and then to Harrisburg, and after being mustered into the service were immediately started south. There were 77 in the company when leaving Gettysburg and were joined by several others later. They formed Co. E in the Second Regiment of the Pennsylvania Volunteers commanded by Col. Frederick S. Stumbaugh, and served three months.

In calling the honor roll of these first volunteers but eleven are living to answer to their names. They are First Sergeant Jacob Cress, Corporal Jerome Martin, and privates Henry Dustman, John G. Frey, Charles M. Gallagher, Duncan Little, Oscar McMillan, John H. Sheads, Dr. T. T. Tate, Alex. Tate and George Warner. The muster roll of Co. E, Second Regiment is as follows:

He was born and reared at Rhodes' Mill, Freedom township, a son of the late David Rhodes, Sr. In 1865 he removed to the farm near Downsville, Md., where he has since resided. He is survived by his wife who was Miss Sarah Forthman of Waynesboro, Pa., two sons and three daughters, all married, and the following brothers and sisters, David, Frederick and John J. Rhodes and Mrs. S. S. Moritz all of Freedom township.

Howard Wolf died at his home at Bitingen, Oxford township, April 13, aged about 71 years. Death was due to Bright's disease, from which Mr. Wolf had suffered for a year. He was born near Abbotstown, and was engaged in farming all his life until recently, when he retired. He leaves besides his wife, five sons, Emanuel Wolf of Waynesboro, John and Solomon of Bitingen, Edward and Amos at home, also one daughter, Mrs. Edward Milheim, living at Brush Run, Mt. Pleasant township. Funeral was last Saturday, services by Rev. A. L. Irvine of Grace United Evangelical church. Interment at Abbotstown.

Mrs. Susan Crist died last Wednesday morning at the home of her daughter Mrs. William H. Stock, near New Oxford, aged about 90 years. She leaves beside Mrs. Stock, the following children, Mrs. George H. Bitingen of near Arendtsville, Mrs. Levi Crum of Flora Dale, Rev. L. B. Crist of Howard, N. Y., Cornelius Crist, Los Angeles, Cal., and Wesley Crist, Shreve, Ohio. Funeral last Friday, services by Rev. D. T. Koser, interment at 1939 in the Arendtsville cemetery.

Gardner of Huntington township. Two sisters, Mrs. George C. Miller of Huntington township and Mrs. James Johnson of Laumore township also survive.

Albertus McCreary, an artist of Washington, D. C., and 65 years old, recently died of apoplexy at Emergency Hospital, Washington, D. C. He was stricken in a hallway of a building where he had for years conducted a studio, and was conveyed to the institution in an automobile. Mr. McCreary was born in Gettysburg in the McCreary home corner of Baltimore and High streets, and witnessed the famous battle here, and a year or two ago wrote his personal recollections of the battle for McClure's Magazine. He went to Washington thirty-two years ago. He was a member of the Washington Society of Fine Arts and of the National Geographical Society. His body will be cremated and the ashes brought to Gettysburg and deposited in the family lot.

Mrs. Jacob Bolen died at the home of her son, William Bolen, of Plainfield, April 5th, from a stroke of apoplexy, aged 84 years, 5 months and 12 days. The deceased was a native of Heidersburg where her entire married life was spent, her husband dying about 23 years ago. For a number of years Mrs. Bolen had been making her home with her son, J. E. automobile and returning to his home blood poisoning developed which resulted in his death.

Isaac Reibold of Shrewsbury township, York county, was killed at a grade crossing on April 8 by a Northern Central train. Death was instantaneous. He leaves a wife, six daughters and two sons, among the latter Melvin Reibold, barber of the Eagle Hotel shop of New Oxford.

George Benner, the oldest man in the Taneytown district died on last Thursday from pneumonia in his 94th year. He was attacked by grip in February and pneumonia followed and at times he appeared likely to recover but his illness proved too much for his advanced years. He was a grandson of Christian Benner, the ancestor of the branches of the Benner family in this county and was an uncle of John W. and Edward Benner of Mt. Joy township and a cousin of Hon. Geo. J. Benner, Mrs. Altheodore Dushman, Wm. H. Benner and Oliver J. Benner of this place, and Moses Benner of Mt. Joy township. Mr. George Benner was a remarkable man for his age, retaining his mental and physical faculties almost unimpaired until his last sickness. He kept well posted on public events and had a splendid memory, making him an entertaining conversationalist. He leaves two sons, Alonzo, an ex-sheriff of Frederick county, living near Liberty, and Simon, on the home place, near Taneytown, and one daughter, Mrs. Kate McLane, also at home. Funeral services were held on Monday, meeting at the home at 1 o'clock; interment in the Lutheran cemetery, followed by services in the Lutheran church, by his pastor, Rev. L. B. Hafer.

The Best Investment on Earth is the Earth Itself
Real Estate is a Real Investment

Real Estate is the safest investment that exists---it can't fail---it can't abscond---it can't make default---it can't float.

Real Estate in fact is not a risk, it is real and tangible and always has a definite value.

Nothing grows more surely nor to greater real value ultimately than growing real estate in suburban additions.

"Anyone can make money, few can save it!" Make yourself one of the few---don't wait till you are rich to begin, if you do you will never begin---buy a lot today on the weekly payment plan.

Don't wait for a large capital to begin with. Invest your spare dollars in a lot---the increase in value of first one will help you buy a second one.

"Young man buy Real Estate---especially in the outlying suburbs---your investments will make your old age comfortable."---RUSSEL SAGE.

"You cannot duplicate real estate---you can duplicate any other kind of security---Real Estate is the best investment for small savings."---EX-GOVERNOR FLOWER.

A prominent U. S. Senator said:---"Every man who has purchased and owns a home of his own, in which he lives is ALREADY A SUCCESS. The only sure way to secure a home is to save a little money every week or month out of your income, judiciously invest such savings in your little suburban house sites, then STICK, DIG and SAVE until the desired result is obtained."

The Best Investment on Earth is the Earth Itself
Real Estate is a Real Investment

Real Estate is the safest investment that exists—it can't fail—it can't abscond—it can't make default—it can't float.

Real Estate in fact is not a risk, it is real and tangible and always has a definite value.

Nothing grows more surely nor to greater real value ultimately than growing real estate in suburban additions.

"Anyone can make money, few can save it!" Make yourself one of the few—don't wait till you are rich to begin, if you do you will never begin—buy a lot today on the weekly payment plan.

Don't wait for a large capital to begin with. Invest your spare dollars in a lot—the increase in value of first one will help you buy a second one.

"Young man buy Real Estate—especially in the outlying suburbs—your investments will make your old age comfortable."—RUSSEL SAGE.

"You cannot duplicate real estate—you can duplicate any other kind of security—Real Estate is the best investment for small savings."—EX-GOVERNOR FLOWER.

A prominent U. S. Senator said:—"Every man who has purchased and owns a home of his own, in which he lives is ALREADY A SUCCESS. The only sure way to secure a home is to save a little money every week or month out of your income, judiciously invest such savings in your little suburban house sites, then STICK, DIG and SAVE until the desired result is obtained."

CROSSING the DIVIDE

By AZILE AIDYL
[Copyrighted, 1905, by Jessie Morgan.]

The stagecoach rattled out of the town of Redding at 6 o'clock on a snappy December evening. The driver swung his six horses with great flourish and cracking of whip through the rough but level road of the main street and out at the north end of the town. A brilliant dash down the steep incline to the creek, and he brought the coach far up the road on the other side where the mountains rose so sudden from the plains. And so began the climb over the divide.

The three passengers inside the coach, a young girl and two men, apparently accustomed to this mode of traveling, did not brace themselves to resist the pitching and rolling of the ponderous vehicle, but allowed themselves to sway with its every motion.

The road was broken and rough from the heavy autumn rains. Once the coach struck a "chuck hole," which almost brought the inmates to their feet and caused a general friendly laugh.

Up to this time the girl had paid no attention to her fellow travelers. She had been absorbed with her own homesick thoughts. To start the drudgery of a governess' life, miles from nowhere, with no prospect of returning home for a year, was depressing. Oh, well, she must make the best of it. She tried to distinguish the men's faces but it was too dark, and both were muffled in heavy overcoats. As they boarded the coach at Redding she had noticed one was an old man, the other gray as to hair, broad, strong and youthful as to shoulders.

The older man sat beside her on the back seat. The two men chatted about the rich "strike" in Deadwood, where fortunes were being made in a day. She gathered that the young-old man was mining an old hydraulic property just beyond Lewiston, and he was on his way there. Well, she was going "just beyond Lewiston" also, and she wondered if this huge person was to be a neighbor of hers.

Their desultory talk gradually died away, the old man fell asleep, and his head bobbed and swayed and ducked about until he seemed in danger of losing it, but he slept on oblivious of such alarming possibilities.

At 11 o'clock they reached the Halfway House, and while the driver changed horses the passengers stretched their cramped limbs, pacing the narrow porch of the inn. Later they went into the low, long dining room, where a cold lunch and hot coffee were served them on a table spread with a red and white cloth. The girl saw that the young-old giant could not be more than thirty-seven or thirty-eight years old, though his hair was silver. And such blue eyes! They seemed to belong to a child, so clear and unclouded were they.

He supplied her needs at the table without seeming to do so, and when the driver called "All aboard!" he helped her into the coach in the same unobtrusive manner.

The fresh horses, only four now, as the heavy climb was over, pulled the stage along at a livelier pace, and within a half hour they had reached the summit of the divide and commenced the descent.

The driver cracked his whip, and they whirled down the narrow mountain road, swinging the horses far out on the very edge of the embankment as they turned the outward curve of the mountain and then sweeping rapidly in at the bend—as only a stage driver can and keep his coach in the middle of the road.

It was a magnificent night, the moonlight making it clear as day. The girl from her window could see innumerable lofty peaks of the great coast range stretching in what seemed a level line.

The passengers were startled by a sudden jerking of the coach and a wild imprecation from the driver.

"Something's wrong," said the giant, and he opened the window on the right hand side and looked out. In a moment he drew back.

"The off lead has broken the inside trace and is frightened," he said as he divested himself of his overcoat. The driver must have some help. "Don't be nervous"—this to the young girl. "We'll fix it all right."

He opened the door and stood on the step a second. By this time the terror of the runaway was communicated to the other horses, and they were fast getting beyond control. The coach was rocking and pitching at a tremendous rate.

"Close the door after I get on top," he called to the old man, who was thoroughly awake by this time, and then, waiting until the coach swung around the inner curve, he put one foot halfway up the door on the open window ledge and grasping the low railing above, pulled himself up on to the top of the coach.

The girl had closed the door and, leaning far out, watched him as the swinging coach permitted step to the seat of the driver and over the dashboard to the tongue. A terrible lurch and he had to pause and hold on for a moment.

"Pull hard on the wheelers," he said to the driver. "I'll look after the others."

Slowly he began moving along the tongue of the wagon, and the girl felt sure he was talking to and reassuring the horses, for his presence did not seem to further alarm the poor frightened brutes.

The girl's hands suddenly grasped the sides of the window as she saw him near the end of the narrowing tongue and realized what he purposed doing. For a moment he paused to pat the neck of the wheeler; then, standing with one foot on the swinging singletree, he gave a tremendous leap and sprang to the back of the undaunted leader. He drew himself along over the foaming creature's shoulder and, reaching forward, succeeded in freeing the bit from its clinched teeth, then, talking softly and gently patting its neck, gradually quieted the poor animal, which now, responding to the sawing of the reins, came to a standstill halfway down the mountain side.

The man sprang to the ground, as did the driver, and together they mended the trace and looked over the entire harness. The horses, steaming and trembling, were now docile as lambs.

"You'll have no further trouble to-night," said the man to the driver. "These poor brutes are pretty thoroughly exhausted."

"Smoking Jehoshaphat, but that was a close shave!" said the driver. "We'd all been in kingdom come if it hadn't been for you."

"Oh, not as bad as that, I guess," answered the man and, turning to the horse who had caused all the trouble, "You would have come to your senses in time, wouldn't you, old boy?" The horse answered by rubbing his head against the man's shoulder.

The giant walked back and climbed into the coach as though nothing unusual had occurred, but the driver as he mounted to his seat and gathered up the reins muttered: "That dog-gasted horse never giv' in like that to anybody in his life before. That feller's a regular charmer, like the one in the show at Frisco."

And as the stage rattled on he would say every few minutes, "A regular charmer, that's wot he is."

They made fairly good time thereafter and just at dawn pulled up before the door of a small hotel in Lewiston. As the girl, very pale, stepped to the ground she held out her hand to the silver haired giant, saying:

"I want to thank you. I saw what you did, and it was that which frightened me most. You saved our lives. I shall never forget it. Goodby," and she disappeared into the hotel.

He saw her several times after that at the Peterson ranch just below his mine. He learned that she was the new governess for the Peterson children, but was always busy when he called at their ranch. And how often it seemed necessary to see Peterson lately, even though he never had more than a moment's talk with her.

One day a terrible storm came up, and it rained unceasingly, which kept the giant busy strengthening the reservoirs. The next morning he was awakened by the roar of rushing water. Dressing hurriedly and putting on his high rubber boots, he was soon down at the point of the hill where he could see that Peterson's ranch was entirely submerged, the house seeming to stand in the center of a lake, with the water gradually rising past the window sills. He hurried down the hill and waded through the three feet of water to the house. He climbed through a window, and there on the stairs sat the girl.

"Throw something warm over your head and shoulders and come down," he called.

The girl unhesitatingly complied. He opened the door with great difficulty; then mounting the stairs halfway he gathered her in his arms and without a "by your leave" strode out of the door through the water to the hills.

"The storm is abating, and the water will soon recede, but you could not remain there. My foreman's wife will make you comfortable."

How small and light she was! He could carry her so forever! And how disgustingly narrow the flooded valley seemed! Reluctantly he placed her on the rising ground.

"Where were the Petersons?" he asked.

"They went to visit relatives on the X-Bar ranch. Oh, they left the hired man with me! He had just gone, as you came, to see what he could get in the way of a boat or a balloon."

Then still in a laughing tone, though her eyes filled, she said, "It seems to be your business to come to my rescue."

"Won't you give me the job for life?" he asked eagerly. "I believe I could prevent disaster touching you, even a flood."

And, looking up into his strong, powerful face, she answered, "I believe you could," as she put both hands in his.

HUMAN BAIT.

The Sad Tale of the Men Who Gather Leeches in the Norfolk Swamps.

Pale and lean, he spoke in a low voice, crumpling a water cracker:

"Dyin' is hard work, and sulphur minin' is hard work, but how'd you like to be bait at a shillin' a day? That ain't quite a dollar."

"I was human bait for a leech dealer in England all one spring. It was back in the eighties, but I ain't never recovered the healthy color and weight what I lost. I guess I never will now."

"Down Norfolk way I baited—down in the Norfolk broads. Broad's is swamps. All them swamps, together with the mild, moist climate, makes Norfolk a great place for leeches. Me and a dozen other chaps was leech bait."

"We would wade in with our breeches rolled up to our knees, and as soon as we'd feel a leech on our legs we'd tear him off and drop him in a basket slung from the shoulder. Quick as thunder we'd do it, but he'd be considerable plumped out even in that little while. And when a dozen leeches settled on you together the last of 'em by the time you got round to him would be as fat and heavy as a lump of lead, whilst you'd be that much lighter natcherly."

"In the late spring the leeches took to deep water. Then the bait had to strip and wade in up to their chins. With all that surface to look after, we played a lesin' game with the leeches. The quickest of us couldn't stand more'n four hours of it without most fadin' from weakness. And the pain! For some parts of the human bait is mighty sensitive, I tell you."

"The trade's died out now. There's no more call for leeches, and it's a good thing. Bein' bait is too hard on a man. It's worms' work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SAFE BOTH WAYS.

The Way Rajah Birbar Saved His Head by Ready Wit.

Rajah Birbar, a boon companion of the Emperor Akbar, the great contemporary of Queen Elizabeth, was a notable wit. The story goes that the emperor once sent Birbar with a message to the king of Persia.

The latter, for some reason or other, bore a grudge toward the rajah and in order to see him lose the emperor's favor thought of a device.

He asked Birbar: "Which of us two is greater in power and majesty—I or Akbar? But, mind you, if your answer is in any way unfavorable to me I will order your head to be struck off."

"Your majesty," replied Birbar without loss of time, "is like the full moon while the emperor, my master, resembles the crescent."

The king was highly pleased with his reply and let him go.

This news was, however, carried to Akbar, who was wild with rage when he heard it. When Birbar returned to his master's court he was asked to explain himself on pain of death.

"My comparison," said Birbar, "meant only this much and nothing more—that the decline of the Persian king's power had commenced, just as the full moon, after it is full, goes on waning, while your majesty is destined to rise on and on till, like the crescent becoming the full moon in time, it will shine forth with magnificent splendor of glory."

The emperor, who was a great patron of wit and wisdom, heaped the rajah with rewards.

Clerk's Elbow.

"To remove shiny spots from coat elbows and trousers seats," said a clerk—"I'll tell you how it is done."

The sun was strong on him as, upon his lofty stool, he munched his mid-day sandwich from this ink smeared fingers, but on his old clerk's coat and old trousers no shiny spots reflected the light.

"Clerks' elbow" such spots are called," he said. "It's like housemaids' knee. To cure it you soak the glittering spot in cold water for half an hour. Then you take a teasel—that's a very stiff thistle—and you rub the spot with it till a nap or fuzz is raised up. Then with a clothesbrush you lay the nap down the right way, and, presto, the shine is gone!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Sand in Sandpaper.

"There is no sand in sandpaper," said the manufacturer. "It is powdered glass that does the business. That's where the broken bottles go to." He nodded toward a mass of broken bottles in the yard. "We powder the glass into half a dozen grades," he said. "We coat our paper with an even layer of hot glue. Then without loss of time we spread on the glass powder. Finally we run a warden roller lightly over the sheets to give them a good surface. When in the past they made sandpaper of sand it wouldn't do a quarter of the work that glass paper does."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Some of our young farmers are afraid they will not get their oats out in time. In 1847 the oats were sown in May. I can recollect that it was tall in the straw but do not recall how well filled out. In 1848 oats were all sown in March. My father planted 17 rows of corn in large field on April 12. That night a snow of 8 inches fell. There was no more corn planted in April that year and the 37 rows father planted rotted and had to be replanted.

THE PENNSYLVANIA GERMAN

AN APPRECIATION OF THE GERMAN BY COL. T. C. ZIMMERMAN

An Element Composing a Very Large Proportion of the Inhabitants of Adams County.

Among the greatest of the migratory races have been the Germans, who have shown far greater staying powers than any other people. According to Hegel, the receptivity of the German races—that is, the easy adoption and ready assimilation by them of new institutions, and the capacity to adjust themselves to new environments—makes them the best immigrants in the world. In other words, they became Gauls in Gaul, Britons in Britain and they learned how to become Americans in the United States.

Francis Daniel Pastorius, and his fellow colonists, who with his little band of thirteen families, laid the foundation of the first German settlement in this country 227 years ago, must have been of a kind described by Goethe in his Dichtung und Wahrheit, as men who were filled by nature with a rich provision of force, activity and toughness.

The emigrant of those days had qualities which gave to the race a robust energy and an inflexible sturdiness—qualities that were potential in moulding the character of the population of Pennsylvania and other future States of the Union. He was plain, brave and abiding. He was orderly and thrifty. To all these qualities he added a love of civil and religious liberty that was deeply engrained in his heart. But for his advent this country would not have made its great advance in agriculture, for he was pre-eminently a man of the soil, and knew better than any one else how to secure the largest returns from the storehouse of nature's riches, for was it not Schiller himself who in picturing the happy homes of Germany, its unity of domestic life, its patriotism, its music, its philosophy, its history, and its poetry, making glad hearts of all her children, said it was in that country where

"Man and the soil serene
Dwell neighbor-like together—and the still Meadow sleeps peaceful 'round the rural door."

Brave men were these pioneers; not weaklings. Hearts of oak had they; not mere palpitating machines that fluttered at the thought of danger. In their struggle for bread, willing hands and vigorous constitutions were supplemented by healthful impulses and nerves of steel. They came not hither to settle down in the lap of affluence, nor to bask in the favor of kings. On the contrary, they came to wrestle with untried difficulties—to grapple with fate—in a new world; to cut down and clear up broken forests, in which they were confronted at almost every step by hostile savages and wild beasts. Many and fierce were their struggles, recalling the conflicts of covenanters and clansmen in the highlands of Scotland, the bloody deeds of banditti in the defiles of Greece, the battles of Saracens and Crusaders on the plains of Asia Minor.

In his description of the Teutonic heart, Tacitus was right in naming the three great characteristics as "love of country, love of freedom and love of domestic life." It was because of the hatred of tyranny by these early settlers and their love of home and country, that they sought an asylum here. It was because of this that the blood of these early immigrants came to be among the first that flowed into the veins of the new Christian Commonwealth—the holy experiment which William Penn invited them to join in.

One can almost see that band of brothers, with great free heart, in solemn talk and prayer, giving thanks to God on that blissful eventide when those first German immigrants arrived on the banks of the Delaware. It must have been to them like standing on the shores of a golden age of hope. And as they stood there in prayer, throwing themselves for the hundredth time the eye of fancy can almost see the glimmer of the rising moon upon the whitened sails of the good ship Concord, after its months of tempestuous sailing, bearing upon their ruffled bosom a light that seemed prophetic of the happiness and prosperity which would some time illumine their homes in the El Dorado which they had just found in the new world.

"Upon the world's great altar stairs
That slope through darkness up to God,"

True it is, that the stability of the German character is well defined in the expression that the Palatines were the "one race in the United States which most fully got into the soil," and in fact, that they have held their ancestral seats with less change of ownership than any other.

In our Revolutionary War Germany was in sympathy with this country. In the Civil War she was in sympathy with the Union. Frederick the Great furnished his own military staff Baron Steuben at the time of the Revolution, to train the colonial soldiers in the use of arms. He was at Monmouth and commanded the left wing of the army and was side by side with Washington at the surrender of Yorktown. He became a citizen of the United States, and to this day his remains lie buried in the Empire State of New York.

The whole history of the German people has been one of sympathy with us in our oppression in 1776, and in our efforts to make this "the land of the free and the home of the brave" in the sixties. Their whole treatment of us has been one of friendship and affection.

While we of the cities are most accustomed to associate the Germans with busy metropolitan life; while he is, indeed, an active, intelligent spirit in commerce and manufacture, in the mechanic arts and all learned professions, nowhere do his vigorous natural traits appear to better advantage than when he is seen as an agriculturist. His native shrewdness was shown in his acquisition of the choicest lands in the Pennsylvania and Virginia Valleys. These he caused to bloom under a cultivation which represented the joint product of scientific knowledge and patient toil. Where, however, fortune cast him upon a rocky hillside, he showed his unconquerable disposition and gave proof of ability to obtain from nature the best results from the scantiest means, and it ever has been that the German farm is a model home. Comfort, cleanliness and thrift abide there, and a feature seldom omitted is the vine and arbor, which is the summer home for the family.

Pennsylvania and Virginia were the two States first to receive that great impact of immigration, which, going out from them, has reached every section of the Union and stamped itself upon all the occupations of our life—making part of us a peaceable, patriotic people, who "have learned to love their new home, while not forgetful of the old."

In this age of sham, where there is so much that is spurious, it is refreshing to have the lines of social and commercial intercourse strengthened by contact with the typical German, who is honest, who speaks the truth, despising hypocrisy, loves his fellow man, loves home with all its cognate pleasures, who pays his debts, does his work thoroughly and is satisfied with what he has earned. No wonder peace and prosperity follow in his wake wherever his lot is cast.

The more the passionless exploits of this people are considered the more evident it becomes that the German—the patriot, the burden-bearer and hero, the patient, painstaking, economic citizen, the frugal tradesman—deserves an honored place in the eyes of an appreciative world.

On occasions of this kind the descendants of the German colonists may be pardoned for a measure of self-laudation. It is no mean inheritance to have been descended from the plain, sturdy, God-fearing men who colonized the banks of the Schuylkill and tamed the wilderness into fertile gardens, and doing it all for the glory of God and for liberty of conscience. The men who settled this region were as brave and pious as the Puritans and vastly more tolerant, and they left behind them records that are unstained.

The descendants of these early German settlers are today the central influence and impelling power of a large proportion of the more important activities, viz, in commerce, industry, education, agriculture, as well as in the professions—men who not only made this portion of the State so rich in historic reminiscence and its people so tolerant of religion, but who laid deep the foundations of a stable and an enduring prosperity.

Look whoso'er you may, you will find well nigh countless evidences of German genius and German skill, while along every artery of trade are felt the quickening currents of German life.

In the Bethlehem, as in Allentown, Catasauqua and Reading, and indeed, throughout the whole of Eastern Pennsylvania, there are industrial quarters, especially in the manufacturing districts, where the Germans introduced various handicrafts in a modest way, that are now grown to be among the largest in the country.

The story of the German enterprise, thrift and prosperity in the eastern part of Pennsylvania is that of many other counties in the State. In the Church, at the bar, in the medical fraternity, in school and university, in journalism, in agriculture, in the mechanic arts, in the business life, in manufacturing, industry, in war and in peace, the offsprings of Teutonic stock have held their own with the best.

The early German settlers were great factors in saving the provinces for the British during the French and Indian wars, and later in achieving the independence of the colonies. Indeed, in all that goes to make the life of the American people happy and prosperous, and honorable and successful, the Pennsylvania Germans have been an important factor. Particularly is this true in the upbuilding of our Commonwealth and in the development of Eastern Pennsylvania.

In the magnificent development of her vast natural resources—in her teeming manufacturing of every variety—in her finely cultivated farms—in her railroads, canals and public works—in her busy and progressive cities, towns and villages—in her institutions of learning, her public school system, and her newspapers, Pennsylvania stands to-day the peer

Without Fear of Successful Contradiction, We Claim that the

is Better than all Others for these very Pertinent Reasons:

Most Comfortable bed ever slept on—soft, yielding, but springy and resilient—never packs or gets lumpy, or loses its feeling of newness. That is because it is made of Ostermoor sheets; built, not stuffed. We have scores of letters from doctors and competent judges who declare it the only

Absolutely sanitary mattress because dust cannot work into it; no vermin can harbor in it; a sun-bath is all the renovating it ever needs; it will not absorb dampness, disease germs, or any poison from perspiration or the atmosphere. It is always

Perfectly Dry because non-absorbent. If the ticking is dry, the mattress is dry. No taking cold from it, no unpleasant or musty odor about it; always fresh and sweet. Testimonials in our free book bear witness for those who have used it for thirty years or more and who do not hesitate to say that it Lasts a Life-time and stays in perfect condition. It never needs remaking or renovating. You may remove and clean the tick as often as you like.

No other mattress in the world, of any material, at any price, from any maker or through any dealer, can truthfully make and prove all the claims as can the Ostermoor. Do not take our word for it—our word is good—but if you will

The book is handsome as well as convincing; contains over 200 illustrations—about beds of all ages about sleep, its lack (insomnia); about mattress-hair—some things will be surprising and you will wish you had known the merits and styles of Ostermoor Mattresses, Church cushions, etc. This book costs you a post card; don't you wish a copy? of any State in the Union. She is an empire within herself, and there is upon earth no other which could bear complete isolation from all outside intercourse with so little disadvantage. And these are the people whom it has become the fashion in certain quarters to deride; of whom it is said they have no culture and no literature; whose language is held up to ridicule, and whose drift is made the subject of disparaging comment.

Among these detractors is Dr. Falkner of Connecticut, whose recent derisive characterization of what he designates as the "illiteracy" of the Pennsylvania Germans, has met with well-merited rebuke at the hands of college professors and the press of the State. Rev. Dr. Schaeffer, Superintendent of the Schools of Pennsylvania, head of the National Teachers' Association, and regarded as one of the world's greatest educators, says: "I have lived among Pennsylvania Germans all the days of my life, and I have never known one who can not read and write, and if illiteracy means the inability to read and write the Connecticut Yankee is certainly off his base."

Dr. Stille, himself a distinguished historian and scholar, has put upon record that "of all the races which settled on the soil of Pennsylvania, the German forms a very important part of the bed-rock of the civilization of the State. What," he said, "can a man know of the special history of the Pennsylvania-Germans? Much that is falsely called history has been written without such knowledge."

Detractors of the Pennsylvania-Germans, like Faulkner, must not overlook the fact that they whom they deride lead all the other colonists of America in the establishment of Sunday Schools; in the Abolition movement; in the printing of Bibles; in the fact that every Pennsylvania-German town had its printing press, and that the product of the early presses of each of the German towns of Reading, Lancaster, Ephrata, Skippack, Summerville, and Frederick, Md., was as great, perhaps, as the number of books printed in Boston and in the colonial period, while technically the advantage was in favor of the Pennsylvania-German printers.

But what are the facts in the case. Let us call up competent testimony. "Of the persons emigrating from Germany to the United States," says Consul General Mueller, in a report to the State Department, "nine hundred out of every thousand, are fitted to enter the various walks of active American life." He adds, "As a rule they are strong, well trained and intelligent." And this from an English source: "Germany yields more intellectual produce than it can use and pay for," says the gifted George Eliot. "What a splendid tribute to the intelligence of this people! And yet, well educated as are the large proportion of those who come to this country, they are not of a kind

"Whose pride of intellect exalts its horn
In proud contumely above the wise and meek."

True, one does not hear nor see around the habitations of these people the silvery splash of iridescent fountains; one does not behold pillared corridors encompassing garden and bower, nor trains of liveried servants with flowing garments dancing attendance upon pampered guests; nor, indeed come into contact with but little if Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as a sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

RECORD YOUR DEEDS

By an Act of Assembly of 1893, "All Deeds and Conveyances shall be recorded within ninety days after their execution or shall be adjudged fraudulent and void against subsequent purchasers."

Also the Act of Assembly of 1899, prescribes a short form of Deeds, and "again requires the recording to make them valid."

It is also a great protection against loss or deed being burned by having them recorded, and costs but a small sum, compared to getting a new deed. Bring or send them into the Recorder's office, and in a few days they will be returned to you.

indeed, any of the glitter and tinsel of luxurious civilization, but what is far better. In what was once an unbroken wilderness one may see in fancy's eye the kindling dawn bathing in rosate beauty the humble abodes of a happy people; homes that once were the lairs and abiding places of wild beasts and savages—I say, one may behold instead, a flood of golden beauty like that which coming from some angel of light, might have transformed the streams and fountains of the lost Eden into visions of crystalline liveliness.

The natural advantages of Pennsylvania are the endowment of beneficent Nature, but their unparalleled development and her steady progress are in a great measure attributable to the sterling character of the Pennsylvania Germans. That race character which has been developed out of a thousand years of history on another continent, is unaltered by the influences which usually work out radical changes in these matters. This may seem to some like a generous overstatement of historic fact, but hear what an eloquent reference to the people of this State, as well as to the beauty of their environments, was made over 90 years ago by Dupont, when in pointing to these things as they existed during the first century of our social existence, he said: "Should Pennsylvanians hereafter degenerate, they will not need, like the Greeks, a fabulous Arcadia to relieve the mind from the prospect of their crimes and follies, and to redeem their own vices by the fancied virtues of their forefathers. It is certain," he said, "that no country on earth ever exhibited such a scene of happiness and peace."

As with the German immigrant of today, so with the Germans who settled in Pennsylvania in the early days of this country. They did not look upon the United States as an El Dorado, but as the best country under heaven for a man or woman willing to work, and Germans are workers. They had heard of this new country with its promise of fertility and loveliness and enduring treasures. It was to them a sort of Elysium which had long been pre-figured in the chambers of a delighted expectancy.

In every war, from the Revolution to the hostilities with Spain, Pennsylvania Germans sustained the national honor and integrity of the Union. Among the governors of Pennsylvania they contributed Simon Snyder, Joseph Hiester, John Andrew Shultz, George Wolf, Joseph Rittner, William Bisler, James A. Beaver, Francis R. Shunk, John F. Hartranft and Samuel W. Pennypacker.

Christopher Sauer was a pioneer in type-making and printing. His Bibles have become famous. The Ephrata monks had their own type and press and paper mill. William Rittenhouse, of a kindred race, had preceded them with the first paper mill in America, on the Wissahickon. Among Pennsylvania scholars and authors were Paschorn, of Germantown; Dock, of Skippack; Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, of Trappe. Pennsylvania's splendid system of free public schools had an ardent advocate in Governor Shultz. Governor Wolf in 1834 secured the passage of a bill creating the system, and Governor Rittner gave permanency to it. It is a remarkable commentary on German tendency to educational progress that free schools were practically conceived and created under German governors. It is unnecessary to point out how much the same element have had to do with the administration of the system in later years, down to the present time.

Note, if you please, the extent and the activity of the German press in Colonial America. Printing was carried on at 21 places in Pennsylvania; three in Maryland; four in Ohio; five in Virginia; one in Massachusetts; one in New York; and one in New Jersey, and one in Nova Scotia. A list of the printers and publishers of German books from 1728 to 1830 is as follows: At Allentown there were six; at Easton eight; at Ephrata nine; at Germantown nine; at Hanover six; at Harrisburg eleven; at Lancaster twenty-six; at Reading seventeen; at York eight; at Lebanon eight; at Philadelphia forty-seven, besides others elsewhere.

Hon. W. U. Hensel in a tribute to Pennsylvania Germans recently said: "In the fullness of time the romantic or ideal side of the pastoral life of Eastern Pennsylvania will tempt the pen of the imaginative writer, and when this shall be touched, no phase of the State's history will more abound in richness of historic material. Neither Bret Harte on the Pacific nor Cable in Louisiana, nor Hawthorne and Mary Wilkins in New England, Irving in New York, James Lane Allen in Kentucky, nor our own Bayard Taylor in the Quaker settlements of Chester county, had finer fields for the exercise of romantic genius than has that future master of historic fiction who shall idealize the character of the Pennsylvania German peasant farmer—the man with the hoe," whose face has ever been lifted to the stars.

"The Mennonites, Amish and Dunkards, have for two centuries plowed, seeded and harvested the fields of Lancaster county, and in all this time, this Pennsylvania county has held primacy of all these United States in wealth of agricultural production—the while its surplus population has moved in steady procession and with even tread across the Ohio, the Wash and the Mississippi, beyond the 'Great Divide,' and now to grasp rich possibilities of Puget Sound."

"From the beginning in wealth and commerce as in the race elements, Pennsylvania displayed a variety of versatility unknown to any other province; and to-day, with two billions of capital invested in manufacturing enterprises, her steam railroads have assets aggregating five billion dollars—one-third the entire wealth of all the railroads in the United States. The unparalleled wealth and variety of her natural resources have given her government a redundant revenue, and to her schools and charities she scatters plenty over a smiling land."

"In science, the lustre that Rittenhouse, Ruhn and Bartram gave to her chief city has been reflected by a century of schools of institutions of historic splendor, rich equipment and world-wide fame."

We have reason to be proud of the many virtues of those German pioneers. They came from a land of romance and legend—from a country whose hillsides are dusky with luxuriant foliage and where little burghs nestled at the feet of towering mountains are decked with clustering vines, where the very air, parting with its invisible fingers the flowers of the field and the leaves of the forest, sweep over river and turret, and over the mountain crags, until every nook and crevice seems to echo with the whisper of a thousand legends. And speaking of legends suggests this fact: While England and Germany have exchanged literary commodities, America has been the heir of all these commodities and many more. While this is true in a large sense, it is especially so in regard to much of our mythical literature, as for example the fairy story in the possession of which Germany is exceptionally rich. And how naturally we begin our way up in literature by reading the German Maerchen. It is the literature of the children and the fireside of the family, if you please. While the Germans give wide currency to this fascinating reading, they do not pretend to believe in these fairy beings themselves. Steh, das ist eine wahne Gschichte, is the half-wistful phrase which occurs so often in Hans Andersen. The expression, of a would be credulity—who would not believe the fairy story if he could? That, for instance, which is stated Herman Laug so beautifully tells in his charming painting, Das Maerchen.

Who shall steal the golden key of that citadel of the world's childhood, the German fairy tale? Who shall surrender it into the hands of the infidel, that wretched Turk who is always at our gates—the Encyclopaedia? Those drifting sea mists of northern gray seas, those twilight hazes of great forests, the shadow, and the myriad of spirit images, which have led us onward, up to Undine and to the great poetry of Faust, the charm of Tieck and Goethe, and Schiller. The richest literature in the world, after Shakespeare and Milton, lies behind the German language.

And now, a word or two about the women among the early Germans—their personal appearance, their customs, their high stage of physical development, their gigantic stature, their education and so forth. "The German women were a wonderful race," says Louis Cooper Bates, from whom we quote. "Their possibilities for development seemed unsurpassed. In personal appearance they resembled their husbands, seeming, as Tacitus remarks, to belong all to the same family. They were nearly seven feet tall, with fair skins, ruddy cheeks, bright blue or keen gray eyes, and long fair hair upon which they bestowed the greatest care. So tall were the Germans that Sidonius Appollinaris, a Latin poet, plaintively relates that 'being in Gaul, and finding the people so tall, it was impossible for him to address verses of six feet to patrons who were seven feet high.'"

"In maidenhood, the hair of a maiden was allowed to flow freely over her shoulders; not until her wedding day could it be bound up. Girls in their hair meant the same as girls in their teens with us. Married women could braid and pin up their hair and adorn it with garlands. Long hair was a mark of the free woman. Anyone who should cut it off was punished with death. Heavy fines were imposed upon one who should disarrange a woman's coiffure or 'obbo' so that it came down, or upon one who should touch a maiden's braids. Women sometimes took oaths by placing their hands upon their braids of hair. German law prohibited familiarities of any sort, between men and women. The dress of a woman left her neck and arms bare. A heavy fine was imposed upon anyone who should touch her hand, or her arm below the elbow, still heavier if he touched the upper arm."

"Where shall we find the truest modern type of the early German woman?" asks the writer, who makes answer thus:

"Among these early people was a nation of Saxons. These Saxons crossed the channel to subdue Britain. Loving freedom above all things, the later pushed west across the Atlantic and as Puritans sought a place where they could worship God in freedom of soul. From these people have descended the women who to-day stand side by side with their husbands in the struggles and successes of life, their comrades, home-makers, friends and counselors, no longer their chattels, but each the possessor of the love and respect of the other, these American women of to-day are the truest modern representatives of the early German women."

An old physician is quoted as saying of the American of to-day:

"Their pure lives passed in healthful open air pursuits, insure to them long and wealthful careers. In whole communities there is often no taint of disease. They transmit to their descendants vigorous constitutions and healthful impulses, so that these start in the race of life so much better equipped for success than the children of others."

Chief among those who shed lustre upon the early history of our Commonwealth was Conrad Weiser, sometimes called "The Father of the Pennsylvania Germans"—the pioneer, hero, patriot, soldier and trusted interpreter—concerning whom the prophetic words of General Washington have peculiar significance at this time, now that a memorial tablet has been erected to his memory through the patriotic efforts of the school children of Berks county and under the auspices of the Historical Society of Berks county. The tablet which is of bronze was embedded in the western wall of "The Old White Store," near the northeast corner of Fifth and Penn streets, Reading, wherein he met the Indians in conference and smoked the pipe of peace. The dedicatory address was delivered by Thos. C. Zimmerman, representing the Historical Society of Berks County.

As a matter of historical interest, the following inscription appears on the tablet:

"Posterity Will Not Forget His Services."—Washington.

In Memory of Col. Conrad Weiser.

near the close of the French and Indian War.

The Weiser Building, where he often met the Indians in conference was erected by him on this site in 1731.

Born in Germany, in 1696, arrived in Berks in 1729, died in 1769, near Womelsdorf, where his remains are buried.

His unswerving honesty, set a shining example to future generations. Under the auspices of the Historical Society of Berks county this tablet was erected in 1907 by the school children of the county.

Eloquent with golden traditions and radiant with the flutter of flame-like banners, one may trace on the broad canvass of the centuries, as one may see in the blended colors of the two nations—Germany and America—that sweep across its face like the deep rose of the dawn, the development of a race that, perhaps, less than any other, endeavors to maintain its individuality, its prejudices, and its old home habits when once it has forged the indissoluble links that bind it to the Great Republic. Your Scotchman and your Englishman amalgamate slowly. The Irish are clannish in a less degree, but they do not readily cease to be Irish-Americans and become Americans only. In this there is nothing discreditable or unbecoming. It has its origin in racial peculiarities not under discussion here. German blood and German brain and brawn have made a deep impression on this country. In the arts and sciences, in philosophy and romance, in music, painting, sculpture and architecture, in manufactures and agriculture, eye, turn your eye in almost any direction, and you will find that a thread of German culture is woven in the warp and woof of the highest civilization of America.

Let us, therefore, rejoice to-day, that there flows in our veins the blood of so good an ancestry. Let us renew, in song and speech, our undying affection for the memory of those gallant spirits whose virtue, loyalty and courage contributed so much to the up-building of the American Republic.

Let England, with rapturous emotion, point to the little island that well nigh dominates the world. Let her boast, as well she may, of the illustrious line of her great literary worthies who by their genius have placed upon her language the regal stamp of an imperishable perpetuity.

Let the Newer England—the home of the thrifty, alert and God-fearing Puritan, and the seat of an enlightened intelligence—let her sing her praises in honor of the illustrious sons of those Eastern Commonwealths that have given to this nation some of the brightest minds in the galaxy of the wise and great.

Let Ireland, "that exquisitely beautiful island which seems to have been lifted laughing yet glistening with tears from the iridescent depth of the jewel-crested sea"—let her lip in tender melody to enraptured ears the story of her wonderful traditions. Let her diat with loving pride upon her enchanted isles, her enpurpled bowers and the green-crested billows of verdure that rise and fall like the heavings of her own great heart, over one of the fairest portions of God's foot-stool.

Let the societies of Holland, amid oceans of oratory, depict the glory and heroism, and the great civic and domestic virtues of the children of the Netherlands.

Let the Caledonian clubs make the welkin ring with hearty shouts for Robert Burns, the poet laureate of humanity, and the sweetest warbler of the pent-up songs of the human heart that ever lived, and let the sons of Scotia paint with loving hand the heroic deeds of a brave and noble ancestry.

Freely and gladly will we join them all in their affectionate tributes to the memory of the loved and honored ones who gave them home and country; but let us, descendants of the German race, be not a whit behind them in extending most loyal and single-hearted enthusiasm to the strong virtues of our forefathers. Let us not forget to rehearse, in tenderest cadence, the story of that "wide, green, cool, silent country, with its endless realms of forest and its perpetual melody of river waters," of its houses, gabled and peaked and carved till they are like so many poems of the Minnesingers. In brief, let us not be "Short swallow-flights of song that dip their wings in tears and skim away," but songs like Heine's, as so beautifully described by George Eliot, "full of music and feeling—like birds that not only enchain us with their delicious notes, but nestle against us with their soft breasts, and make us feel the agitated beating of their hearts."

The Best Investment on Earth is the Earth Itself Real Estate is a Real Investment

Real Estate is the safest investment that exists---it can't fail---it can't abscond---it can't make default---it can't float.

Real Estate in fact is not a risk, it is real and tangible and always has a definite value.

Nothing grows more surely nor to greater real value ultimately than growing real estate in suburban additions.

"Anyone can make money, few can save it!" Make yourself one of the few---don't wait till you are rich to begin, if you do you will never begin---buy a lot today on the weekly payment plan.

Don't wait for a large capitol to begin with. Invest your spare dollars in a lot---the increase in value of first one will help you buy a second one.

"Young man buy Real Estate---especially in the outlying suburbs---your investments will make your old age comfortable."---RUSSEL SAGE.

"You cannot duplicate real estate---you can duplicate any other kind of security---Real Estate is the best investment for small savings."---EX-GOVERNOR FLOWER.

A prominent U. S. Senator said:---"Every man who has purchased and owns a home of his own, in which he lives is ALREADY A SUCCESS. The only sure way to secure a home is to save a little money every week or month out of your income, judiciously invest such savings in your little suburban house sites, then STICK, DIG and SAVE until the desired result is obtained."

Some of our young farmers are afraid they will not get their oats out in time. In 1847 the oats were sown in May. I can recollect that it was tall in the straw but do not recall how well filled out. In 1848 oats were all sown in March. My father planted 37 rows of corn in large field on April 12. That night a snow of 8 inches fell. There was no more corn planted in April that year and the 37 rows father planted rotted and had to be replanted.

CROSSING the DIVIDE

By AZILE AIDYL

The stagecoach rattled out of the town of Redding at 6 o'clock on snappy December evening. The driver swung his six horses with great flourish and cracking of whip through the rough but level road of the main street and out at the north end of the town. A brilliant dash down the steep incline to the creek, and he brought the coach far up the road on the other side where the mountains rose so suddenly from the plains. And so began the climb over the divide.

The three passengers beside the coach, a young girl and two men, apparently accustomed to this mode of traveling, did not brace themselves to resist the pitching and rolling of the ponderous vehicle, but allowed themselves to sway with its every motion.

The road was broken and rough from the heavy autumn rains. Once the coach struck a "chuck hole," which almost brought the inmates to their feet and caused a general friendly laugh.

Up to this time the girl had paid no attention to her fellow travelers. She had been absorbed with her own home-sick thoughts. To start the drudgery of a governess' life, miles from nowhere, with no prospect of returning home for a year, was depressing. Oh, well, she must make the best of it. She tried to distinguish the men's faces but it was too dark, and both were muffled in heavy overcoats. As they boarded the coach at Redding she had noticed one was an old man, the other gray as to hair, broad, strong and youthful as to shoulders.

The older man sat beside her on the back seat. The two men chatted about the rich "strike" in Deadwood, where fortunes were being made in a day. She gathered that the young-old man was mining an old hydraulic property just beyond Lewiston, and he was on his way there. Well, she was going "just beyond Lewiston" also, and she wondered if this huge person was to be a neighbor of hers.

Their desultory talk gradually died away, the old man fell asleep, and his head bobbed and swayed and ducked about until he seemed in danger of losing it, but he slept on oblivious of such alarming possibilities.

At 11 o'clock they reached the Halfway House, and while the driver changed horses the passengers stretched their cramped limbs, pacing the narrow porch of the inn. Later they went into the low, long dining room, where a cold lunch and hot coffee were served them on a table spread with a red and white cloth. The girl saw that the young-old giant could not be more than thirty-seven or thirty-eight years old, though his hair was silver. And such blue eyes! They seemed to belong to a child, so clear and unclouded were they.

He supplied her needs at the table without seeming to do so, and when the driver called "All aboard!" he helped her into the coach in the same unobtrusive manner.

The fresh horses, only four now, as the heavy climb was over, pulled the stage along at a livelier pace, and within a half hour they had reached the summit of the divide and commenced the descent.

The driver cracked his whip, and they whirled down the narrow mountain road, swinging the horses far out on the very edge of the embankment as they turned the outward curve of the mountain and then sweeping rapidly in at the bend—as only a stage driver can and keep his coach in the middle of the road.

It was a magnificent night, the moonlight making it clear as day. The girl from her window could see innumerable lofty peaks of the great coast range stretching in what seemed a level line.

The passengers were startled by a sudden jerking of the coach and a wild imprecation from the driver.

"Something's wrong," said the giant, and he opened the window on the right hand side and looked out. In a moment he drew back.

"The off lead has broken the inside trace and is frightened," he said as he divested himself of his overcoat. The driver must have some help. "Don't be nervous"—this to the young girl. "We'll fix it all right."

He opened the door and stood on the step a second. By this time the terror of the runaway was communicated to the other horses, and they were fast getting beyond control. The coach was rocking and pitching at a tremendous rate.

"Close the door after I get on top," he called to the old man, who was thoroughly awake by this time, and then, waiting until the coach swung around the inner curve, he put one foot halfway up the door on the open window ledge and, grasping the low railing above, pulled himself up on to the top of the coach.

The girl had closed the door and, leaning far out, watched him as the swinging coach permitted step to the seat of the driver and over the dashboard to the tongue. A terrible lurch and he had to pause and hold on for a moment.

"Pull hard on the wheelers," he said to the driver. "I'll look after the others."

Slowly he began moving along the tongue of the wagon, and the girl felt sure he was talking to and reassuring the horses, for his presence did not seem to further alarm the poor frightened brutes.

The girl's hands suddenly grasped the slides of the window as she saw him near the end of the narrowing tongue and realized what he purposed doing. For a moment he paused to pat the neck of the wheeler, then, standing with one foot on the swinging singletree, he gave a tremendous leap and sprang to the back of the maddened leader. He drew himself along over the foaming creature's shoulder and, reaching forward, succeeded in freeing the bit from its clutched teeth, then, talking softly and gently patting its neck, gradually quieted the poor animal, which now, responding to the sawing of the reins, came to a standstill halfway down the mountain side.

The man sprang to the ground, as did the driver, and together they mended the trace and looked over the entire harness. The horses, steaming and trembling, were now docile as lambs.

"You'll have no further trouble to-night," said the man to the driver. "These poor brutes are pretty thoroughly exhausted."

"Smoking Jehoshaphat, but that was a close shave!" said the driver. "We'd all been in kingdom come if it hadn't been for you."

"Oh, not as bad as that, I guess!" answered the man and, turning to the horse who had caused all the trouble, "You would have come to your senses in time, wouldn't you, old boy?" The horse answered by rubbing his head against the man's shoulder.

The giant walked back and climbed into the coach as though nothing unusual had occurred, but the driver as he mounted to his seat and gathered up the reins muttered: "That dog-gasted horse never giv' in like that to anybody in his life before. That feller's a regular charmer, like the one in the show at Frisco."

And as the stage rattled on he would say every few minutes, "A regular charmer, that's wot he is."

They made fairly good time thereafter and just at dawn pulled up before the door of a small hotel in Lewiston. As the girl, very pale, stepped to the ground she held out her hand to the silver haired giant, saying:

"I want to thank you. I saw what you did, and it was that which frightened me most. You saved our lives. I shall never forget it. Goodby," and she disappeared into the hotel.

He saw her several times after that at the Peterson ranch just below his mine. He learned that she was the new governess for the Peterson children, but was always busy when he called at their ranch. And how often it seemed necessary to see Peterson lately, even though he never had more than a moment's talk with her.

One day a terrible storm came up, and it rained unceasingly, which kept the giant busy strengthening the reservoirs. The next morning he was awakened by the roar of rushing water. Dressing hurriedly and putting on his high rubber boots, he was soon down at the point of the hill where he could see that Peterson's ranch was entirely submerged, the house seeming to stand in the center of a lake, with the water gradually rising past the window sills. He hurried down the hill and waded through the three feet of water to the house. He climbed through a window, and there on the stairs sat the girl.

"Throw something warm over your head and shoulders and come down," he called.

The girl unhesitatingly complied. He opened the door with great difficulty; then mounting the stairs halfway he gathered her in his arms and without a "by your leave" strode out of the door through the water to the hills.

"The storm is abating, and the water will soon recede, but you could not remain there. My foreman's wife will make you comfortable."

How small and light she was! He could carry her so forever! And how disgustingly narrow the flooded valley seemed! Reluctantly he placed her on the rising ground.

"Where were the Petersons?" he asked.

"They went to visit relatives on the X-Bar ranch. Oh, they left the hired man with me! He had just gone, as you came, to see what he could get in the way of a boat or a balloon."

Then still in a laughing tone, though her eyes filled, she said, "It seems to be your business to come to my rescue."

"Won't you give me the job for life?" he asked eagerly. "I believe I could prevent disaster touching you, even a flood."

And, looking up into his strong, powerful face, she answered, "I believe you could," as she put both hands in his.

Frank Inconsistency.

John Hunter, one of the pioneers in the practice of medicine over a century ago, was absolutely blind to any theory unsupported by facts. While many men were guessing out things he was seeking to prove them.

"I love to think," he said to one of his colleagues, though he afterward qualified the statement by an almost contradictory one:

"But why think? Why not make the experiment?"

Like other men of real genius, he was not afraid of seeming inconsistent. Sir Astley Cooper once asked him, with some surprise, if he had not once stated an opinion directly at variance with one he had just put forth, and he replied:

"Very likely. I hope I grow wiser every year."

Again a pupil inquired if he had not written to a certain effect.

"Never ask me what I have said," he returned. "or what I have written. But if you ask me what my present opinions are I will tell you."

Sometimes, too, he would say to pupils who were taking down notes: "You had better not write down that observation. Very likely I shall think differently next year."

HUMAN BAIT.

The Sad Tale of the Men Who Gather Leeches in the Norfolk Swamps.

Pale and thin, he spoke in a low voice, crunching a water cracker: "Divin' is hard work, and sulphur mine is hard work, but how'd you like to be bait for 4 shillins a day? That ain't quite a dollar."

"I was human bait for a leech dealer in England all one spring. It was back in the eighties, but I ain't never recovered the healthy color and weight what I lost. I guess I never will now."

"Down Norfolk ways I baited—down in the Norfolk broads. Broad's is swamps. All them swamps, together with the mild, moist climate, makes Norfolk a great place for leeches. Me and a dozen other chaps was leech bait."

"We would wade in with our breeches rolled up to our knees, and as soon as we'd feel a leech on our legs we'd tear him off and drop him in a basket slung from the shoulder. Quick as thunder we'd do it, but he'd be considerable plumped out even in that little while. And when a dozen leeches settled on you together the last of 'em by the time you got round to him would be as fat and heavy as a lump of lead, whilst you'd be that much lighter natchery."

"In the late spring the leeches took to deep water. Then the bait had to strip and wade in up to their chins. With all that surface to look after, we played a losin' game with the leeches. The quickest of us couldn't stand more'n four hours of it without most faintin' from weakness. And the pain! For some parts of the human bait is mighty sensitive, I tell you."

"The trade's died out now. There's no more call for leeches, and it's a good thing. Bein' bait is too hard on a man. It's worms' work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

SAFE BOTH WAYS.

The Way Rajah Birbar Saved His Head by Ready Wit.

Rajah Birbar, a boon companion of the Emperor Akbar, the great contemporary of Queen Elizabeth, was a notable wit. The story goes that the emperor once sent Birbar with a message to the king of Persia.

The latter, for some reason or other, bore a grudge toward the rajah and in order to see him lose the emperor's favor thought of a device.

He asked Birbar: "Which of us two is greater in power and majesty—I or Akbar? But, mind you, if your answer is in any way unfavorable to me I will order your head to be struck off."

"Your majesty," replied Birbar without loss of time, "is like the full moon, while the emperor, my master, resembles the crescent."

The king was highly pleased with his reply and let him go.

This news was, however, carried to Akbar, who was wild with rage when he heard it. When Birbar returned to his master's court he was asked to explain himself on pain of death.

"My comparison," said Birbar, "meant only this much and nothing more—that the decline of the Persian king's power had commenced, just as the full moon, after it is full, goes on waning, while your majesty is destined to rise on and one till, like the crescent becoming the full moon in time, it will shine forth with magnificent splendor of glory."

The emperor, who was a great patron of wit and wisdom, heaped the rajah with rewards.

Clerk's Elbow.

"To remove shiny spots from coat elbows and trousers seats," said a clerk—"I'll tell you how it is done."

The sun was strong on him as, upon his lofty stool, he munched his mid-day sandwich from thin, ink smeared fingers, but on his old clerk's coat and old trousers no shiny spots reflected the light.

"Clerks' elbow" such spots are called," he said. "It's like housemaids' knee. To cure it you soak the glittering spot in cold water for half an hour. Then you take a teazel—that's a very stiff thistle—and you rub the spot with it till a nap or fuzz is raised up. Then with a clothesbrush you lay the nap down the right way, and presto, the shine is gone!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Sand in Sandpaper.

"There is no sand in sandpaper," said the manufacturer. "It is powdered glass that does the business. That's where the broken bottles go to." He nodded toward a mass of broken bottles in the yard. "We powder the glass into half a dozen grades," he said. "We coat our paper with an even layer of hot glue. Then without loss of time we spread on the glass powder. Finally we run a wooden roller lightly over the sheets to give them a good surface. When in the past they made sandpaper of sand it wouldn't do a quarter of the work that glass paper does."—Cincinnati Enquirer.
